„Asterix im Lesezelt“

Comic as an innovative teaching method in working with functional illiterates

(The Workshop will be held in German language)

Contents:

With this workshop we want to get to know and to use the comic/graphic novel as an instrument and new method in teaching people with reading and writing difficulties. In addition to didactic inputs the training will be very practice-oriented, with the intention to enable the participants to create comics for their lessons and for their own target group.

- Comic as a method in the teaching of reading and writing skills
- Basic knowledge of the comic art, its history and practice workshops
- An introduction to use comic-software for teaching
- Exchange of didactic methods in the field of reading and writing skills
- Profitable exchange to promote the reading and writing skills of adults in Europe

Who can participate?

- Our workshop is addressed to people who already work didactic, creatively, artistically or politically in the educational system or plan to get involved in this field:

For example: Teachers, educators, street workers, social workers, vocational education trainers, stakeholders for the illiterate, textbook writers, developers of teaching and learning materials, artists and illustrators, graphic designers, comic artists, representatives for people with disabilities, educational policy makers...

- People from the 28 EU Member States in addition to Iceland, Switzerland, Liechtenstein, Norway and Turkey can participate in the workshop.

What does it cost?:

- Through the EU-funding of this GRUNDTVIG Workshop the participation and workshop fees for participants from the above mentioned program countries are free of charge. Accommodation and subsistence will be provided by the workshop-operator, travel costs will be reimbursed according to the program guidelines.

Functional illiteracy:

- Throughout Europe, there are still many people who are unable to use their written language in everyday life as it is required in the social environment. These people are referred to as functional illiterates.

With our workshop we would love to contribute to help those people in Europe to get better reading and writing skills in order to improve participation in social and professional life. We invite people from Europe to an exchange of knowledge and skills.
